

ROSENTHAL STILL HAS POLICEMEN WITH HIM

Magistrate Denies His Request for Warrants to Keep Them Out.

MORE AFFIDAVITS COMING

Tenderloin Story Has It Vigilance Is Due to a Gambler's Enmity.

A policeman is still on guard in the big room that runs the entire length of the second floor of Herman Rosenthal's house, at 104 West Forty-fifth street, the room which the police say Rosenthal used for gambling and in which uniformed officers from the West Forty-seventh street station, who relieve each other every eight hours, have been stationed night and day since Rosenthal was raised three months ago to-morrow.

Rosenthal's method of trying to get rid of the night and day police surveillance in his house, a method unique among gamblers, by asking for warrants on a charge of police persecution against Inspector Cornelius Hayes and Capt. William Day of the West Forty-seventh street station failed yesterday.

Rosenthal and his lawyer, Joseph Rosenback, appeared before Magistrate Butts in the West Side Court yesterday forenoon and asked for the warrants, but the Magistrate denied the request.

"I have given careful consideration to the application," said Magistrate Butts, "but to me it seems that there is not sufficient evidence presented here to justify issuing the warrants. I may give you the warrants, however, if you present enough additional facts."

Lawyer Rosenback said after leaving the court room that he will file another affidavit for his client to-morrow, in which there will be detailed some conversations said to have been held in which Rosenthal claims that the inspector and the captain boasted that they were responsible for the police guard in the Forty-fifth street residence, and that the officers would not be withdrawn until Inspectors Hayes and Capt. Day "are good and ready" to withdraw them.

Rosenback says he will file a decision made by Mayor Gaynor, when Mr. Gaynor was a Justice, covering the case of eleven policemen stationed in a Brooklyn place some years ago. Justice Gaynor's opinion then was that if the policemen "had a curfew warrant" it was their duty to make the search expeditiously and go, and in the Brooklyn case Justice Gaynor decided that the presence of the police "made out the crime of oppression as charged."

Around the Tenderloin story, the story ran that Rosenthal's present troubles are all due to the enmity of a well known gambler who is friendly with a police officer, and got one of the officer's men into Rosenthal's place to obtain evidence and has been punishing at him ever since. Rosenthal, however, maintains that the raid on his place and the present surveillance are the result of the pique of a police official of lower rank than captain, who had been a partner of Rosenthal in the gambling house to the extent of 50 per cent of the profits. Rosenthal says he and his policeman partner had a falling out and that now the official is trying to get even.

"I know Rosenthal and have had a dinner with him," the policeman said when told of Rosenthal's charges. "But I never had any interest in his gambling house. Rosenthal was raised on April 16 because we had the goods on him. Officers have been stationed there night and day since to see that he doesn't start up again, that's all. Inspector Lahay, Inspector Hayes and Lieut. Becker of the strong arm squad paid an early forenoon visit to Headquarters yesterday, and were closeted for an hour with Deputy Commissioner McKay. Mr. McKay said after the conference that he would make no comment on what had been arrived at during the discussion. When he was asked about the charges made by Rosenthal against a policeman the Deputy Commissioner told inquirers to wait until Commissioner Waldo returns from Toronto to-morrow and ask him.

Patrolman William Rehahn spent a hot eight hours on Rosenthal's second floor from 8 o'clock A. M. until 4 o'clock P. M. and then Patrolman Frank Tomney came to relieve Rehahn until midnight, when Tomney in turn was relieved.

Rosenthal and his wife, after fanning themselves at a window all day yesterday, having given up their practice of looking the door and then arguing things out each time a fresh plucked officer comes to the house to relieve his team mate. Mr. Rosenthal now unbars the basement door promptly and accompanies the new arrival up to the second floor and then conducts the man just relieved down and out to the street. Rosenthal last night sent out word to all callers that he has nothing to say.

One story going the rounds of the groins of curious folks who gather now and then to gaze at the house was that Rosenthal was busy in the basement building a hot air balloon, and that another in the steam heating plant of the house. Patrolman Tomney already had discarded his coat, waistcoat, collar and tie and was trying to hang out of the second story window to get any air that was moving.

Merry wags yelled up to the policeman that Rosenthal had sent out for some sneezing powder also, a jet or two of which might be blown into the room through the keyhole every few minutes to mingle with the steam and furnace heat. Information was further yelled up to Tomney that Rosenthal had decided to send for a plumber to remove the shower bath and tub from the bathroom in a corner of the big room.

SAYS OSBORNE LOST HER CASE.

Woman Lawyer's Counter Claim to His Demand for Fee.

Agnes H. K. Mulligan, a woman lawyer, yesterday succeeded in having Supreme Court Justice Gavegan vacate an order for her examination before trial which Attorney James W. Osborne obtained. The court held that Osborne apparently intended to subject Mrs. Mulligan to cross-examination before trial.

Mrs. Mulligan retained Osborne last year to appear as her trial counsel in an action she had brought against Charles Barson and William J. O'Brien for damages for being ejected from premises in The Bronx. The jury decided against her. After the trial Osborne submitted a bill for five days services at $250 a day. Mrs. Mulligan refused to pay and Osborne sued her.

An answer submitted yesterday Mrs. Mulligan brings a counter claim for $5,000 damages. She says Mr. Osborne "so negligently and unskillfully conducted the trial that by his negligence and want of skill the defendant lost the case and suffered damages of $5,000."

Mrs. Mulligan contends that Osborne's "unskillful conduct" consisted in not preparing himself. She says he refused to let her inform him about the testimony of certain witnesses and refused to allow her to make suggestions regarding cross-examination.

Mrs. Mulligan says that Mr. Osborne agreed to accept a lump sum of $750 for his services as trial counsel for her. He denies that he made any such agreement. He obtained ex parte the order for Mrs. Mulligan's examination before trial, which Justice Gavegan vacated at her request.

SLAYS TWO STRIKE PICKETS.

Non-Union Shoemaker Says He Was Attacked by Pair.

CINCINNATI, July 13.—Walter Fitzwater of Covington, 19, who had remained at his employment in a shoe factory here in spite of the strike among the seamstresses that has been on since last November, shot and killed two strikers who were beating pickets this afternoon on New street near the factory.

The men killed were Joseph Wohmeyer, 28, of 324 East Twelfth street, and Alfred E. Patino, 30, of 24 East Court street, the former being shot through the heart and the latter through the abdomen.

Fitzwater confessed to the double killing, stating that he was attacked by three men, knocked down and had to shoot to save himself. He said he had been attacked almost daily by strikers since accepting a position in the shop several weeks ago. His wife died three months ago and his baby on Thursday of this week.

He said he was compelled to remain at work because of the expense attending these bereavements. The shooting was in the presence of several hundred factory employees.

AVIATOR SMITH KILLED.

Amateur Record Holder Plunges 75 Feet in California.

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Cal., July 13.—While making a flight from Mountain View to Palo Alto to-day Victor Morris Smith, holder of the world's amateur speed record in an aeroplane, plunged seventy-five feet when wind capsized his machine here and was killed.

Smith was a son of Victor Morris Smith, Jr., the late manager of the Western Meat Company of San Francisco.

Young Smith was in his 50 horse-power Curtiss biplane. He landed in a prairie orchard and nearly every bone of his body was broken. He was dead when picked up.

Smith was considered one of the most daring aviators developed on the Pacific coast.

VAINLY OFFER SKIN FOR GIRL.

Her Parents and Pastor Ready for Operation When She Dies.

As soon as the Rev. F. B. Curry, pastor of the Park Methodist Episcopal Church of Weehawken, N. J., learned that one of his little Sunday school pupils, Alva Van Gelder of 118 Hauxhurst avenue, was in a critical condition from burns suffered on the Fourth of July, he offered her parents a reward of $100 to have her skin grafted on to the burned limbs of the clergyman's immediately after her death.

The parents of the little girl, Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Gelder, did likewise, as well as a dozen or more little playmates.

That was on Thursday night last. While the family physician, Dr. R. A. Hotwell, was preparing for the operation he discovered that mortification was setting in and that it was too late for the grafting process.

Nevertheless, the minister and others pleaded with the doctor to be permitted to undergo the operation. The child died yesterday.

THAW WALKS AND DRIVES.

Justice Keogh Permits Him an Outing Every Day.

WHITE PLAINS, July 13.—Since the close of the taking of testimony in the habeas corpus proceedings, Harry K. Thaw has been permitted by order of Justice Keogh to go walking and driving daily. Yesterday he went for a long automobile ride over country roads with Warden John H. White and his wife. This afternoon he went for a long walk leaving the jail about 4 o'clock and not returning until after 6. As he walked through the main street of the village toward the open country with the warden, smoking a cigar and wearing a cap and an old blue suit, he was recognized by very few persons.

Justice Keogh has decided to hold court in the court house here instead of in his chambers at New Rochelle on Tuesday forenoon to hear the argument for Thaw's release. Thaw's counsel, Mr. Jerome, representing the Attorney-General's office, will not sum up, but will hand in a brief.

RUSSIAN FLEET LOST THROUGH BLUNDERS

Japanese Admiral Reviews the Battle of Tsushima
Straits.

TOGO ANXIOUS FOR A TIME

Feared Rojostevsky Might Not Sail Into Trap Laid for Him.

TOKIO, June 13.—The Japanese celebration of the anniversary of the battle in which the Russian fleet was practically annihilated in the Straits of Tsushima was marked this year by the publication in magazines and newspapers of a flood of articles dealing with the naval history of Japan. These were read to school children on the day of the celebration.

Among the lot one of the most notable was an article by Admiral Kamimura, whose failure to sink the Vladivostok squadron caused him to be in disfavor in his own country for many months. As he says himself the discontent and criticism caused by his failure deprived him and his crews of all interest in life. When the prospect of meeting Rojostevsky's ships was offered to them he says:

"Every one on board our ships was longing to fire into the enemy. Every sailor had graven on his heart the determination to fight till the last hostile vessel had gone down. It was this sentiment which led to the brave deeds that on the applause of friend and foe alike made the second squadron conspicuous for its acts in the great battle."

The Admiral describes the battle of the Japan Sea, as the Japanese call it, not as a struggle between Russia and Japan merely, but as one of the greatest sea battles of the world. "Nowhere," he says, "is there to be discovered in history so great a battle as this or so overwhelming a defeat."

It appears that after the Russian ships sailed from Anam the Japanese lost track of them. Togo's scouts were completely at fault and it was only through a blunder of Rojostevsky that they again picked up his fleet.

The Russian Admiral had been hampered from the time when he left Russia by the slowness of his vessels and as he approached the theatre of war he detached one of his transports, which was hopelessly impeding him, with orders to take shelter at Shanghai. The Japanese cruiser Shinano got wind of this movement and immediately located the left wing of the Muscovite armada. Dashing north she picked up the Izumy by wireless and that ship from that time forward hung day and night upon the enemy's flank, keeping Admiral Togo constantly informed as to the enemy's location and movements.

Togo had been anxious to let the Russian ships approach a different course from that which he had figured on when he took up his post at the entrance to the Korean Straits, and it was a great relief to him and his officers when the news of the Russian advance in his direction was communicated.

Kamimura gives a graphic description of what took place on board his own ships when the hostile fleets came into contact. He says:

"When our men first caught sight of the enemy's thirty-eight vessels they were one and all overjoyed, their nerves tingled, and they were almost bursting with rage. They were impatient to show the skill of a Japanese."

"Those of the second squadron under my command had, however, a feeling quite different from the others. We thought instead of victory our defeat. We had made up our minds to make the Sea of Japan our graves. We had not the least thought of gold, power, or even of fame. We had crossed over to the realm of self-forgetfulness."

"When our fleet came into touch with the enemy Admiral Togo issued the following order: 'The rise or ruin of the empire depends on this one battle; let every one display his enthusiasm and energy.'"

"While expressing deep sympathy with 'the brave Rojostevsky,' the Japanese Admiral does not refrain from unparaphrased criticism of the false strategy which preceded and, as he thinks, led directly to the Russian disaster. These are the comments he makes:

"The conduct of the Russian Admiral from the time he set out on his expedition. Why did he not hasten to sea before our vessels had had time to refit after the earlier battles? Why did he linger in the inhospitable waters of Madagascar? Of course the explanation was that he waited for his third squadron, the vessels of which were old and slow and hampered his movements."

"What he ought to have done was to select his swiftest and strongest ships and then make a dash for Vladivostok. The third squadron bound him hand and foot."

"His passage into the Yellow Sea without our knowledge must forever stand to his credit, but why did he then disclose his plans by sending his transport into Shanghai? Why did he not overhaul with his fast scouts the slow Shinano? Why did he not use his wireless to intercept our messages?"

"The fact is that he did not expect our fleet to wait for him in the Korean Straits, and he did not give our navy credit and foresight, and this resulted in his utter ruin."

BULLET HIT PLAYING BOY.

Harrassed Day Dreamer Thought He Was Shooting a Thief.

Smilingly Bruno Pesano picked his way through the groups of children playing in Columbus Park yesterday and seated himself on a bench near the Franklin street gate. He was on his way to the park to play with his friends. He was playing with a diamond ring from his breast pocket and a diamond ring from his breast pocket and a diamond ring from his breast pocket.

He reached out his hand and grasped the jewelry. Bruno held to his watch and ring and in a second he and the stranger were rolling on the walk. Bruno won and his antagonist ran. Then Bruno returned to his lodging house in Rector street, where he had been staying since his arrival from Pittsfield, Mass., and armed himself with a revolver before going again to the park to wait the arrival of the stranger who was to sell him a ticket to Chicago.

He took his seat on the same bench and waited. He heard some one approaching from the rear and turning he fired. The bullet lodged in the left foot of Bruno Deluca of 73 Baxter street, who was playing ball with other boys.

When Patrolman Daly dashed into the park Bruno Pesano walked over to him and stammered something in Italian. A volunteer interpreter told him that Pesano confessed having shot the boy. Pesano was pitifully agitated.

The boy went to the Hudson Street Hospital.

At the Elizabeth street station Pesano said he was 26 years old and lived at 79 Jones avenue, Pittsfield. He was held on a charge of felonious assault.

TROOPS DESERT TO MANUEL!

Republican Soldiers Said to Have Joined Royalists.

LISBON, July 13.—The troops of the republic sent to Brazaganza to fight the Portuguese royalists were reported today to have joined the enemy.

Royalist reverses in the field continued today. A detachment of royalist troops were surprised this afternoon between two columns of republican troops and lost twenty dead and twenty-two prisoners. Late tonight fierce fighting continued.

The Republican Government has decided not to shoot captured royalists, as originally intended.

It will probably be arranged to send them to penal colonies in Africa.

A royalist plot to seize the batteries of the fortress of Sousel was frustrated today when a number of women's divided skirts and a supply of ammunition and arms were discovered. A number of arrests were made in Belas, in the Province of Estremadura. The conspirators had planned to disguise themselves as women and thus gain entrance to the fortress.

SUFFRAGETTE HELD AS FIREBUG.

London Police Investigating Discovery of Bomb.

LONDON, July 13.—Miss Helen Cragga, a militant suffragette, was held for further examination in police court to-day, charged with attempting to set fire to Colonial Secretary Harcourt's house at Oxford.

Though they deny the story of an attempt upon Home Secretary McKenna's life, the police are still investigating the discovery yesterday of what looked like a bomb in his office. It is rumored that the suffragettes have vowed even more dire vengeance against him than any other member of the Cabinet.

Scotland Yard's version is that the rumored attempt against Home Secretary McKenna was only a practical joke.

The election was made necessary because of the death of Mr. Edwards, the Labor candidate, who received a heavy majority at the last election.

The result of the polling with three candidates in the field was that Mr. Outhwaite, the Liberal candidate, was elected by a majority of 654 over the Unionist candidate, G. H. Rittner. Finney, the Labor candidate, was a way down on the polling.

NEW LINE TO CANADA TO BE BUILT BY ERB

New York Financiers Behind
Plan for M. and St. L.
Extension.

ORDER 12 LOCOMOTIVES

Organizers Go Over Proposed System Picking Out New Stations.

MINNEAPOLIS, July 13.—Newman Erb, president of the Minneapolis and St. Louis road and connected with other lines, and other New York financiers to-day organized the Minneapolis, St. Louis and Canadian Railway Company, which will build a line from the vicinity of Watertown, S. D., on the Minneapolis and St. Louis, to the Canadian border.

The other organizers besides Mr. Erb are William J. Wollman of J. S. Rache & Co., New York bankers; Hugh H. Harrison of the New York banking firm of Battle & Co., and William G. Bied, vice-president and general manager of the Minneapolis and St. Louis, with headquarters here. The new construction work, it was announced, would begin in the fall.

The New Yorkers arrived in Minneapolis to-day after taking a run over the western end of the Minneapolis and St. Louis, looking at possible terminals for the new line. It is understood that at the Canadian line a connection will be made with the Canadian Northern, but on this matter Mr. Erb was noncommittal.

With the Canadian extension Mr. Erb and his associates will have a working system and control the greater part from Canada to the Gulf, for it is reported from an authoritative source that a working agreement has already been arranged with the Missouri, Kansas and Texas road.

Mr. Erb declared to-day that he had never seen crop conditions in the Northwest better. Believing that the year's crop will be a bumper one, he to-day signed orders for twelve new locomotives and vouchers for $500,000 to be spent in preparing equipment and improving the road for the moving of crops.

The extension of the Minneapolis and St. Louis to the Canadian border and the making of a connection there with a Canadian road was one part of the plans of the late Edwin Hawley for the development of his line which he started to put through just before his death. The Canadian line was the Canadian Northern. The other part of this scheme was to complete a traffic arrangement or some closer alliance with a road running south to the Gulf, so that there should be a complete transcontinental line north and south from Canada to the Gulf.

The traffic that would be developed through the Panama Canal was what Mr. Hawley had his eyes on.

Newman Erb left New York early last week for an inspection trip of a month over the Minneapolis and St. Louis and his Ann Arbor line. It was then understood that the main object of his trip was to put through the plans for the extension of the line to Canada and the completion of an arrangement with the Missouri, Kansas and Texas whereby the Minneapolis and St. Louis could connect at Moberly, Mo., with this road to the Gulf.

PLAY CARDS IN COURT.

Prisoners Amuse Themselves While Waiting to Be Arraigned.

When Herbert Hass and Sidney Crisler were arraigned in the Yorkville police court yesterday on a charge of stealing two necklaces valued at $15 from Dreier & Co., the Fifth avenue jewellers, the defendants said they wished to waive examination. Detective Dietrich told the court the police had no record of previous offences against the pair. They came from Chicago only a few days ago and registered at the Hotel Astor.

While waiting to be arraigned the young men passed the time in the court pen playing cards. They were anxious to know if they would be allowed to play cards in the Tombs, where they expected to go.

They
